To help you make the NATION'S Business YOUR Business

CARTER FIELD, famous Washington correspondent, is writing for this paper a weekly letter in which he explains and interprets the epoch-making events that are taking place in the national capital.

For twenty years Mr. Field has been observing and reporting the activities of Congress and administrative departments in Washington. His experience and his wide acquaintance among important men in the capital fit him unusually well for the particular task he has undertaken—that of giving you a clear understanding of what all these important developments at Washington mean to you and to other American citizens.

Mr. Field's letters appear in this paper under the heading

SEEN and HEARD Around the NATIONAL CAPITAL

The nation's business is your business today more than ever before. Keep up with it by reading Carter Field's brilliant and interesting letters—tell your friends about them.

How did Appomattox get its name?

The Appomattox River was visited in 1607 by Captain Newport. In Captain John Smith's history of 1608, it was referred to as "Appatack" and as "Apamatic."

The name came from a tribe of Indians. In 1612 Strachey called it "Appatack". In 1622 the Council of Virginia spelled it "Apo-Mat-tucke". Though the years it became "Appomattox" and the name was given later to the county and the court house town at the source of the river.

Dropped Plan For Monument

For several decades there have been efforts to "do something at Appomattox" to memorialize the signing of Peace here. At various times the plans have taken different forms.

The present project to Restore the Surrender Grounds and buildings took the place of a plan to build a huge Monument in the circle at the old village. A design was actually drawn up. But then it was decided that what the public really wanted to see was the old village and its landmarks rather than a monument—hence the Restoration.

Why McLean Came To Appomattox

It is related that Winner McLean, in whose handsome brick colonial home the terms of Peace were signed, came to Appomattox looking for Peace, and literally he found it not only for himself but for the nation.

He lived at Manassas, but when bitter rage around his home he decided it was time to go. So during the war he bought the home here.
